By Frank Visconti, AIA
AIA EUGENE Section Director

As our cities around the world continue to grow, approaches to our downtowns keep evolving. For thousands of years, urban life has been the biggest challenge for engineers and architects. Keeping people healthy, safe and prosperous is directly linked to our built environment. We are continuously evolving within the Electric Age, the Plastic Age and the Information Age. Within our lifetime, the global population has grown from 2 billion to 8 billion people. Cities are growing and the need for more housing and supportive buildings must be balanced proportionally with our energy use. We need to ensure healthy built environments for our bodies and minds, using healthy building methods that are sustainable. The process has had many twists and turns, but the arrow always pointing forward. What was Eugene's downtown like a generation ago? How is any of this decided? Are we planning for the future? Are there still risks of failure?

This year's Design Annual addresses some of these issues. For your consideration, we have included a study on the history of Eugene's Downtown Pedestrian Mall by PhD of Architecture candidate Subik Shrestha, an article on

Architects Without Borders - Friends of Gladstone Nature Park

The Friends of Gladstone Nature Park, a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization, have contacted Architects Without Borders – Oregon seeking help with the next phase of their efforts to develop the 11.5 acre nature park at Webster Road and Oatfield Road in Gladstone, Oregon. They are looking for volunteer help with selection of native plants and design for planting in a 10,000 square foot portion of the park that has been cleared of invasive species. They have received a grant from Metro to buy plant materials. Architects Without Borders does not expect to be directly involved in this work, but would like to help the Friends of Gladstone Nature Park find a Landscape Architect or other qualified person to provide the needed assistance. If interested, or for more information, please contact Nancy Eichsteadt, director of the Friends organization, at jneich@comcast.net.
